Adderall is a prescription medication that combines two stimulants, amphetamine and dextroamphetamine. It works by increasing the levels of certain chemicals in the brain, improving focus, attention, and impulse control. Adderall is commonly prescribed for individuals diagnosed with ADHD and narcolepsy. ADHD patients often experience difficulty concentrating, hyperactivity, and impulsive behaviors, all of which Adderall can help manage. Narcolepsy patients, on the other hand, benefit from its ability to reduce excessive daytime sleepiness.
